

Liz Perry 2020

When I retired as a bookkeeper, I took up sketching and loved it. A few years ago, I took some watercolour lessons and realized how colour can make a sketch come alive. I never seem to have a shortage of subjects or combination of colours to explore. I have had pictures exhibited at the Victoria Hall and the Gallery in the Grove. My picture "Skipper" is from the last photo of my father-in-law, who was the Captain of the Donald Mac, a tugboat, working in the Thunder Bay harbour.
